Informality

In claim 6, line 5, third occurrence, change "the" to --an--.

2.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 6-9 and 14-17 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Plakosh.

With respect to claim 6, Plakosh teaches a digital image forming apparatus (20) comprising:

A store 10 configured to store a plurality of data in a stored order; a selection device (DMA in imager 20) configured to select an arbitrary desired data order for the plurality of data as claimed; a linking controller (print controller 30) configured to link the plurality of data from the stored into arbitrary desired data order selected by the selection device to form a data group for performing an operation (data read out of memory 10 to printer 20, according to col. 3, lines 27-42); an operation controller configured to receive the data group from the linking controller and to control performance of the operation using the data in the data group in arbitrary desired data order selected by the selection input device (see col. 6, lines 35-45).

With respect to claim 7, this limitation is inherent by reference of the imager 20 according to col. 1, lines 15-20 and col. 5, lines 3-5.

Art Unit: 2626

With respect to claim 8, this limitation is addressed with respect to the print job which consists of printing the first and second side of a document by DMA and memories 50 and 52.

With respect to claim 9, Plakosh teaches wherein the plurality of data in the store includes print job finishing conditions (order or readout of data in the memory, for example, when data is rotated, see col. 5, lines 37-53) and said operation includes print job finishing (possible preparation for book mode printing, according to col. 4, line 17).

With respect to claim 14, Plakosh teaches a method of linking independent data from different locations (copied location or memory location whether virtual or real, see col. 1, lines 30-36 and 41-46) in a storage device to form ordered linked data, comprising:

A store 10 configured to store a plurality of data in a stored order; a selection device (DMA in imager 20) configured to select an arbitrary desired data order for the plurality of data as claimed; a linking controller (print controller 30) configured to link the plurality of data from the stored into arbitrary desired data order selected by the selection device to form a data group for performing an operation (data read out of memory 10 to printer 20, according to col. 3, lines 27-42); an operation controller configured to receive the data group from the linking controller and to control performance of the operation using the data in the data group in arbitrary desired data order selected by the selection input device (see col. 6, lines 35-45).

With respect to claim 15, this limitation is inherent by reference of the imager 20 according to col. 1, lines 15-20 and col. 5, lines 3-5.

With respect to claim 16, this limitation is addressed with respect to the print job which consists of printing the first and second side of a document by DMA and memories 50 and 52.

With respect to claim 17, Plakosh teaches wherein the plurality of data in the store includes print job finishing conditions (order or readout of data in the memory, for example, when data is rotated, see col. 5, lines 37-53) and said operation includes print job finishing (possible preparation for book mode printing, according to col. 4, line 17).
